ANOTHER STORY TOLD BY THE OLD SPORT

"I have traveled a great deal about this old state of ours," said the old sport, "and I have seen a great many things which are imbedded in my memory. The old days were different somewhat from those at the present time. I am candid when I tell you that in my opinion if Mark Twain, whom we all knew in the good old days, were to write his 'Innocents Abroad' at this time, that the same would have met with little or no success. I cannot help but think that he owes his greatness to old Jim Townsend, who has long since passed to the great beyond.

"But I started to tell you of something else. On another day I will tell you a few facts concerning the life of Mark Twain in Nevada.

"I was, to use an expression of these times, up against it a good many years ago. I hired out to a Breckinridge county farmer to pitch the farmer's name was Johnson. and let me tell you that he was the brightest men with whom I came in contact. While I was on his ranch, an advertisement brought a suit against Johnson, claiming that the farmer's pigs had broken into the farmer's field and ruined his crop of alfalfa. When the case came on regularly for trial, Johnson was granted permission to represent his own side of the controversy. I have told you before that this man Johnson was exceptionally bright. He conducted his case in an excellent manner.

Perhaps you have heard of Judge Hayden of Reno. He was employed by the plaintiff. He had a terribly squeaky voice. When the trial had progressed quite a while and Johnson showed that he was far from an amateur when it came to law, Hayden took occasion to remark that if he were Johnson he would quit raising pigs and go to studying law.

"Johnson listened to the comment paid him and when the judge had finished he rose to remark that if he were in Hayden's position he would quit studying law and go to raising pigs."

There was quite a little laugh. The newspaper man butted in and said he wished to tell them of something he saw in the early days of Goldfield.

"I went there," he said, "when the camp was booming and it was next to impossible to get a room in the town. Like many others, I was compelled to spend the night hours in a saloon. One night a young man dropped into the Mohawk. It was easy to see that he was tired and was looking for a place to flop. So far as he could see all the available space was taken. However, another glance around the room convinced him that he could squeeze in between two men who were lying on the floor.

"A sparkle lit up his eyes; he moved toward the bar and addressing the bartender, who had been watching him intently, he said, as he pointed to himself, 'Will you please wake Bo 69 up at 7:30?'

"'You're all right,' was the reply of the man behind the counter. I will see to it that your call is not forgotten. In the meantime you had better take a night cap,' he said, as he pushed the bottle in the direction of Bo 69."

BILL ALPINE IS THE TALK OF THE TOWN

Bill Alpine made his debut yesterday upon the streets and received an ovation that was in keeping with his splendid behavior. Bill was dressed in the height of fashion, sporting the latest fashion in picnic costumes. On his back a young lad rode offering tickets for sale. It is the idea that no man shall receive more than one chance to get Bill, the silk hat and the honor of riding at the head of the procession on the glorious Fourth.

Bill certainly looks spick and span. He has undergone some changes in the past few months which seem to have materially improved his appearance as well as his singing voice. While Bill at one time was the proud possessor of a deep basso, his voice has changed and he now speaks to his brethren in a wonderfully musical contratenor.

STOCK MARKET

The following quotations are from received by the reliable brokerage firm of H. E. Epstein:

The market showed more strength yesterday than it has for several days past. Montana Tonopah and Belmont were the star performers of the Tonopah, each of which showed an advance of 2 points over the day previous. The other securities of this camp were about the same as the day preceding.

In the Goldfield district, the increases and decreases were about evenly balanced. Consolidated showed an advance of 2½ points, likewise Silver Peak, while Daisy and Combination Fraction went down the line for 2 points each. In view of the fact that this is generally considered the very worst time of the year on the stock exchange, neither Tonopah nor Goldfield has any cause for complaint, as the quotations of both districts are evidently holding their own.
